

Helping Others is What We Do

The story by Carlos Alfonso Sandoval Miranda in the September/October 2015 issue, “Giving Back to the Community,” highlights one of the very best attributes of our membership—the desire to help others. The efforts of our Latin American members to help indigenous people impacted by an infrastructure project speaks well of the professionals involved.

Carlos did a great job in identifying the social and economic problems, and then sharing how people, companies and agencies from around Mexico came together to improve the situation for those directly impacted. Not only was the article well written, it clearly demonstrates that we bring more to our projects than just meeting deadlines and budgets. Our projects can improve the quality of life for the local community.

Helping others has long been a part of the IRWA history, and it's great to see that it will continue as a part of our future as the Association continues its global growth.
