

IRWA's 58th Annual International Education Conference

Seattle Breaks Attendance Records

BY BARBARA BILLITZER

The 2012 Annual International Education Conference attracted 1,225 professionals to the city of Seattle, Washington, setting a new attendance record for the Association. Kicking off the event were the host Puget Sound Chapter 4 Conference Co-Chairs, Faith Roland, SR/WA and Tom Paine, SR/WA, R/W-AMC, R/W-NAC, who welcomed attendees and thanked IRWA's International Committees for assembling more than 50 educational breakout sessions.

International President Randy Williams, SR/WA, MAI, FRICS, reported that IRWA and the right of way profession is strong and growing. He credited the chapters for the increase in membership, stating that the Association added 100 more members than during the same period last year. Roughly 75 percent of our chapters participate in chapter leadership conference calls, helping everyone stay more connected. Because of their efforts, the Association has retained more of its membership.

In recognition for a lifelong commitment to advancing the right of way profession, Gene A. Land, SR/WA, International President during 1990-1991, was honored with IRWA's Lifetime Achievement Award.

"The reason we succeed with such a small number of paid employees at headquarters is due to the strength of our members and their volunteerism," said Randy. "For an organization of 10,000 members, IRWA staff has only twenty paid employees. Our chapters, along with our international committees, are where our strength comes from. We are only as strong as our membership, and our membership is professional and well educated. We are a body of knowledge and experience, and we will continue to promote our credentials, our education and our ethics."

Randy addressed the substantial energy reserves that are continuing to drive infrastructure development in both the United States and Canada, noting that members are active in all areas, from natural gas and oil to wind turbines. IRWA's professional committees are developing new education programs to help serve the profession in this growing segment. He also spoke about transportation projects that are in the active planning and development stages. "Funding for transportation continues to be more difficult than funding for energy, as energy often gives the faster return on investment. We are now seeing more innovation in transportation funding, and there will be a greater emphasis on public-private partnerships as a funding mechanism. Transportation projects continue to be needed and will be built, and IRWA will continue promoting our profession and reminding the users of our services that, if you haven't acquired the real estate, you can't build the project," said Randy.

Delegates in attendance included representatives from Japan, Thailand, Germany, the United Kingdom, Saudi Arabia, South Africa, South Korea and Uganda. This was also the first conference where IRWA had a chapter outside of North America. The newest chapter is Chapter 83 in South Africa, a country that is undergoing a massive amount of infrastructure development. It is a young and vibrant chapter, and Randy reiterated the benefits of working together and gaining insight from each other's cultures and business practices. He also spoke on the demand for IRWA courses in China, where the Association has already taught courses. There is a significant need for education and credentials in both South Africa and China, both of whom selected Ethics and the Right of Way Profession as their first course. This will serve IRWA well in advancing the Association's high ethical standards on an international level.

With a continued focus on leadership training for chapter officers, IRWA is developing a leadership development curriculum to support a 24-credit program and a special leadership certification. "Leadership training is a life skill, and it has become essential for officer succession," said Randy. "It was twenty years ago that my chapter nominated me to be an officer. My elation of being nominated was quickly tempered by realizing I was going to have to speak in public. We ask a lot of our chapter leaders, and we now provide the tools to help them become better leaders. Leadership skills will advance our chapter leaders in their careers and in their private lives."

Randy also addressed the graying of our profession, noting that half of our members will be eligible to retire in the next seven to ten years. "This drain of human resources is occurring in our federal and state partners also. When a twenty-year employee retires, there is a substantial amount of experience and knowledge that is also retiring. As a result, we will continue to reach out to new professionals, offering them more educational opportunities and faster tracks to certification," he said.

Conference Co-Chairs Faith Roland, SR/WA and Tom Paine, SR/WA, R/W-AMC, R/W-NAC hosted the event and encouraged attendees to make the most of the education and networking opportunities.

IRWA Executive Vice President Mark Rieck reported on the Association's strong performance for fiscal year 2011-2012.

ASSOCIATION PERFORMANCE IS SOLID

In his State of the Association address, IRWA Executive Vice President Mark Rieck reported on trends in membership, education and certification. "I am happy to report another solid performance in fiscal year 2011-2012. We increased membership income to $1.3 million, with 9,147 members through April 2012, and welcomed South Africa Chapter 83 to the Association. We also increased education income to $1.3 million, and the number of IRWA classroom and online participants to 4,593 and 1,307, respectively. And we now have 2,852 certified and designated members – something we can all be very proud of. All in all, a tremendous year in continued tumultuous times."

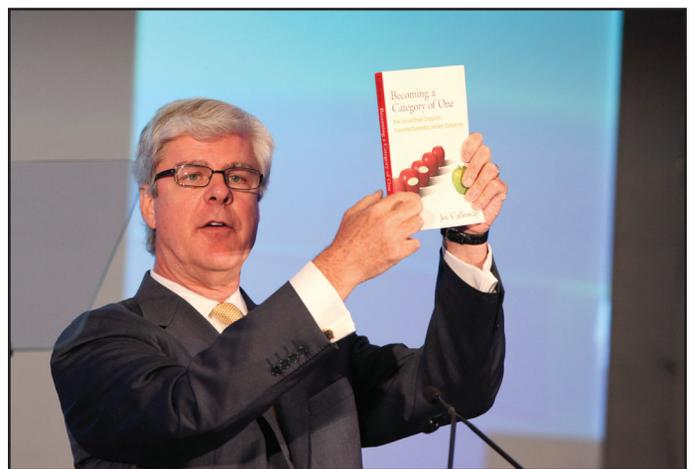

Mark noted that IRWA established a chapter membership incentive program that generated a 38% increase in new members through the first three months of the campaign. Chapters who increase membership by 5% this year will receive up to three free 2013 memberships. Mark also announced the launch of IRWA's Member Network, which will allow members to collaborate and communicate at the chapter, region and committee level, posting information, discussing issues and identifying opportunities.

Mark announced that nearly all of IRWA's core qualifying courses are now available online, giving members access to education on their own schedule, while providing a budgeted amount of $120,000 back to the chapters in honorariums. "We are in the process of selecting a partner that will allow us to provide onsite and multi-site classroom education from any location," he said. "Development is in the works for more intermediate and classroom-based advanced education programming, driven by the specialty certification survey that is currently in progress. The findings from our specialty certification survey will also help identify which certifications have strong meaning in the marketplace, providing a strategic business advantage for our certified members," said Mark. The survey will also help in developing a five-year education/certification development plan for the Association.

"You can expect continued growth and innovation across all IRWA program areas as we work to keep members current, credentialed and connected like never before."

External marketing plays an essential role. In addition to public relations and media advertising, IRWA is also launching a direct marketing campaign to external audiences, promoting IRWA's generalist career path to non-certified members and industry prospects. "As you can see, we take our member value proposition "Current – Credentialed - Connected" very seriously and will continue to deliver against that promise again next fiscal year. Together we make the IRWA the central authority for the right of way profession," said Mark.

"Be the best at what matters most," said performance expert and author Joe Calloway, as he outlined the role that continuous improvement plays in helping people and organizations drive results.

SPECIAL MILESTONES AND HONORS

IRWA's Lifetime Achievement Award was presented to Gene A. Land, SR/WA for his leadership over the years at the chapter, region and international level, as well as the support he has provided for the staff at Universal Field Services to participate so fully in the work of the Association. In addition to his many leadership roles, Gene served as IRWA's 1990-1991 International President. Sharing his appreciation with the 1,225 professionals in attendance, Gene said, "I never thought of all my experiences, friendships and service in the IRWA as something that would earn me any honors. I just enjoyed the work and the people. Receiving this Lifetime Achievement Award from IRWA is a great surprise and I'm humbled by this recognition. Thank you."

During the Annual Awards Luncheon on Monday, June 11th, Jerry Lund, SR/WA said he felt proud and very grateful for being selected as the Frank C. Balfour Professional of the Year. Expressing his gratitude, he encouraged other members to get involved. A member of IRWA for over 20 years, Jerry served as President of Chapter 17 and Region 5 Chair. In

At the awards luncheon, Tom Benson, SR/WA, was honored for achieving a major milestone for his conference attendance. "Thank you for the recognition for my 50th consecutive attendance at an IRWA Annual Conference. Tom has served in every chapter, region, and executive position, including that of IRWA International President from 1979-1980. As the Chair of the International Education (now Professional Development) Committee, he visited many states to charter new chapters, induct officers and promote education. I will continue to be active in IRWA as long as my health permits," he said.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

The 2012 Annual Board of Directors Meeting was held on Wednesday, June 13th with a quorum of 169 voting directors. International President Randy Williams acknowledged Conference Co-Chairs, Faith Roland, SR/WA and Tom Paine, SR/WA for their great work, along with their committee, chapter and region and presented Jennifer Waller, President of Puget Sound Chapter 4 with the 2012 Conference Host check of $10,000. She assured members that the RWIEF will do whatever it takes to maintain quality education at a reasonable cost.

Randy noted that the CRWEF has been an active supporter of IRWA education and programming, as well as funding the development of a Canadian Leadership Institute module and converting classroom courses to an online format. CRWEF President Stewart Anderson, SR/WA thanked the Association for a strong partnership. He acknowledged Chapter 4 and Region 7 for a great conference, announced the $2,500 Canadian Student Scholarship and the approval of extending the foundation officers' terms to two years. He recognized the committee and sponsors for this year's Canadian Hospitality Suite, and accepted donations from IRWA chapters.

Stewart unveiled his CRWEF Coffee Challenge, noting that if members donated the equivalent of the cost of one cup of coffee every week, that would come out to an annual gift of $91 to the foundations. If one-third of the Canadian membership were to accept the challenge, $27,000 could be generated. If half of all IRWA members accepted the challenge, the foundation could generate $450,000. Stewart concluded his remarks by thanking Randy for his leadership over the past year and for his Right of Way Magazine articles in which he encouraged leaders to continue to advance the reputation of the Association. Stewart reminded members that the Disney Company was built on a dream and urged members to dream of a world where IRWA is world-class in every aspect.

She outlined her plans to stay focused on increasing the value of IRWA membership, while retaining and recruiting new members, noting that these goals can be accomplished by creating a business advantage for members. Pat also stressed that a healthy organization needs a variety of members, and IRWA is fortunate to have strong participation from young professionals and chapters, who she considers the heart of the Association. With a new level of involvement from countries like South Africa, IRWA is setting the stage for others to join the IRWA and

TECHNOLOGY

This year, IRWA added several new tools to enhance the conference experience, one of which was the mobile application. While the technology wasn't a new concept, it wasn't until the marketing staff at geoAMPS offered to create it that it became a reality. According to Yogesh Khandelwal, CEO of geoAMPS, "As we prepared to exhibit at the conference, our team saw an opportunity to leverage technology and enhance the experience for each and every attendee. We shared our vision with the IRWA Headquarters staff, and they were equally excited with our vision."

Within two weeks the geoAMPS mobile team had created, tested and released the app on both Apple and Android powered devices, showcasing the company's agility in building quality customized solutions quickly. It included a conference overview, daily agenda, exhibitor listing, floor plans and special events.

In a survey conducted by IRWA following the conference, more than 80 percent of the attendees liked the idea of using the mobile app. Among the 40 percent of those who downloaded it, they found it easy to use and rated it as very valuable tool. The app also demonstrated how mobile technology can be utilized to increase communication and facilitate information between users, a capability that offers enormous efficiencies to right of way projects.
